DEDICATION.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE

THE

COUNTESS OF NORMANTON.

MADAM,

IF an amiable, yet dignified, deportment in the walk of private life, forms the best presumption of a fixed regard for our Country, your attachment to the interests of Ireland cannot be doubted. Allow me, therefore, to lay the following production at your feet: it is intended to facilitate a knowledge of this Kingdom, particularly to our united fellow-subjects.

But the presumption of this Address will be overlooked or forgiven by grateful minds. However, as your Ladyship may be offended at saying much of yourself, it is in my power to justify this Approach, by the Duty which, as a private person and a Clergyman, I owe to his Grace of Dublin. Conceiving clerical exertions as bound to Society in every possible point, that enlightened Prelate has not only permitted, but encouraged, his Clergy to promote the interests of Ireland in every walk of Literature, from abstrusest Science to the humblest Compilation. Yet, it is not only the grown part of the community, but its youth, to whom literary information is peculiarly beneficial. The Church of Ireland, however, owes his Grace great and continued obligations, and proudly looks up to him, not more as an indulgent Parent, than as a faithful Protector. May Providence long preserve his Grace, and enable him to unite archiepiscopal integrity with real patriotism!

But, as the comforts of private life materially contribute to that desirable end, permit me, most sincerely, to wish your Ladyship perfect health, with every domestic happiness.

I have the honour to be,

MADAM,

with the greatest respect and gratitude,

your faithful and obedient,

humble Servant,

MATTHEW SLEATER.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE appearance of the excellent Memoir of the Rev. Dr. Beaufort, long since suggested to the Writer of the following pages the general utility of an attention to the produce, manufactures, improvements, rising trading towns, inland navigation, &c. in the several Counties of this Kingdom. Some time since also commenced general agricultural views of the Counties, published under the patronage of the Dublin Society. Principally to recommend as a pioneer to the younger part of our community, a just value for a country so abundant in the blessings of Providence, and sometimes so ignorantly and ungratefully overlooked, or perhaps contumeliously scorned on a comparison with other parts of the British empire, has been an original and powerful inducement to the present publication.

Some Complete Irish Travellers have been sent out into the world, who have neglected an ancient and noble Province of the Kingdom, and have sported in unkind reflexions on the manners, and perhaps amiable failings, of the warm and open hearted Hibernians. Not so the late most valuable Chancellor of Clogher, the Writer of the Philosophical Survey of the South of Ireland, who, with expanded benevolence and sound observation, conceived all his countrymen entitled to high respect and philosophic criticism. In his Survey of the South, he celebrates, with laudable pride, the talents in various walks of literature and art, of his countrymen in every part of the Kingdom; and forms an illustrious constellation of men of learning and genius.

If public encouragement be extended to this INTRODUCTORY ESSAY, the Writer would avail himself of an opportunity to publish some additional papers on the subject of Ireland. He cannot, however commit these pages to the candor of his countrymen, without expressing acknowledgments, justly due, to his friend the Rev. FOSTER ARCHER, whose extensive and important information has considerably assisted the Writer in forming a laborious collection; and who is well known through every quarter of the kingdom, for the accuracy, integrity and humanity with which he executes the duties of an important office, highly interesting to the dignity of Government, and the happiness of all his fellow-subjects.

The Writer has experienced the advantages of consulting the learned and ingenious LIBRARIAN OF TRINITY COLLEGE, whose lettered talents and obliging manner engage the respect, esteem and gratitude of all persons who visit that noble repository of books and valuable manuscripts for elucidation of antiquities, Oriental knowledge, and universal investigation. At the same time, he has had the happiness of being favoured with the notice and encouragement of another Librarian, and most accomplished Member of the Bar, whose laborious researches into the earliest periods of Legal History or Practice in Ireland, and whose profound knowledge of the Antiquities, Language, and political litical History of his native country, with patriotic zeal and professional qualifications and eminence, have acquired him the continued and general friendship of the learned body to whom he belongs. The performance of Counsellor BARTH. T. DUHIGG goes to the Press in the next week, and may be expected at the close of the ensuing Term. I am warranted from his Preliminary Essay, and the King's Inns Remembrances already published, to pronounce the expected History of the King's Inns, a most interesting and original Legal Work; which will convey an accurate account of our connexion, as a legal body, with the sister kingdom, from the introduction of English law, with Remembrances of those distinguished Judges and Practicers who have adorned the Irish Bench, Senate or Bar.

I cannot help expressing my satisfaction at the celerity, accuracy and attention with which these sheets were committed to the Press. The printing work was performed with even and steady regularity, not set aside or deserted, to give place to intervening casual business. Such honourable conduct justly merits unequivocal acknowledgment.

My gratitude to my Subscribers I cannot express in terms sufficiently strong. I assure them, I have endeavoured to insert in the Volume, all that occurred relevant to the subject, without unreasonably extending or contracting the dimensions of any part of the work. And I shall ever hold myself most highly obliged for the honourable support I have received.

May, 1806.

In a square desert whose side is 8 m, and which consequently contains 64 square miles, or 40,960 acres, (a square mile being 640 acres) is Glandelagh 23 m from Dublin, or the Seven Churches: it literally signifies the Valley of the two Lakes: 400 acres here let for a guinea annually. It was a well inhabited City until 1214, the 15th year of King John, when the See was annexed to Dublin Diocess. The O'Tooles however, by foreign assistance, elected bishops of Glendaloch, and the archbishops of Dublin did not obtain quiet possession till 275 years after, in 1479, in the 18th year of King Edward IV, when a surrender was made in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, by friar Denis White. St. Kevin died in 618, June 3, on which day his festival is celebrated. He founded an Abbey and the Church of the Trinity. The Seven Churches are, 1st, the Cathedral Church. 2d, St. Kevin's Kitchen. 3d, Our Lady's Church. 4th, The Rhefeart, that is, the Sepulchre of Kings. 5th, The Priory of St. Saviour. 6th, The Ivy Church. 7th, Team pull na Skelig, (signifying the Temple of the Desert), with St. Kevin's bed and cell.

Avondale 4 m from Glanely Church, and 7 from Wicklow, belonging now to the family of the late Rt. Hon. Sir John Parnel, improved by his relative, the late Colonel Samuel Hayes, during 30 years.

Avondale is one mile from Rathdrum, in a Cross Road of 9 miles, from Rathdrum to Arklow. Ballymurtagh and Cronebawn Copper mines lie on the right and left sides of the river. Near Avondale lies Casina, Mrs. Hayes, sen. At 2 m from Rathdrum, Kingston, Thomas King, Esq. Two miles from Rathdrum in the Cross road are Cronebawn mines. At 3 m are Ballymurtagh mines on the opposite side of the Avoca. A stream impregnated with vitriolic water, flowing from the Copper-mines is received into stone cisterns, in which Iron is deposited, which attracts the vitriolic particles, and leaves a copper sediment, vulgarly called a transmutation of metals. This mineral stream has destroyed a very fine salmon fishery, a space of five or 6 m to Arklow.

Further in the cross-road lies Cherrymount, Mr. Boulger. At 5 m from Rathdrum is Castlemacadam Church. At 6 m, Ballyarthur, wooded with Oak, Rev. James Symes. At 8 m, Shelton, Lord Viscount Wicklow, one mile from Arklow.

Little Peru, a discovered mine of gold at the foot of Croghan mountain, in the road from Arklow to Aghrim. A peasant fishing in the stream discovered gold, which he sold privately to a goldsmith, during 12 years. September 1795, the discovery was made general, and thousands were engaged in search of gold. The Crown took possession of the mine, and £1000 was granted by Parliament for experiment of its value, by the Commissioners, Abraham Mills and Thomas King, Esqrs. A mass weighing 22 ozs. avoirdupois, was found by 8 poor labourers, and sold for 80 guineas. The sand and mud is impregnated with gold dust, which is detected by washing in cisterns, and lastly whirling in a sieve.

At 31 m, 2 m beyond Rathdrum, in the 6 m road to Aghrim, is Ballynaclash Iron foundery. From Ballynaclash is a communication between the sea side and Baltinglas side of the County, through Glen Molaur, which you enter at 5 m from Rathdrum. By

By Fermoy 107, Rathcormuck 111, Middleton Church in Castracore parish 122, Cloyne 125.

At Rathcormuck 111 is Lisnegar, Lord Riversdale. You cross the Bride river 112 to Kilshanick, Abraham Devonsher, Esq. Ballinterry, Rev. Mr. Ross. Gortroe church, the parish of the Archdeacon of Cloyne. At 114 Mellefontstown, Mr. Neason. At 116 Carduggan, Mr. Davis. Peafield, the late Rev. Archdeacon Mockler. At 118 Leadinton, Maurice Atkin, Esq. At 120 Carrig, Mr. Uniacke. At 122 Middleton (midway between Cork and Youghal) gives the title of Viscount to the noble family of Brodrick. A market and town-house, with a cupola and clock : a public free school, Rev. Mr. Grier. The parsonage. Church in Castracore parish : a steeple capable of holding a ring of bells. A woollen manufactory built by Marcus Lynch, Esq. which cost 20,000l.—1200 people employed. An hospital and dispensary for the poor. On the road to Rostellan is Ballinacurra : a high sepulchral mount, being one of the ancient Tumuli. Seat of the late Rev. Dr. Robert Berkeley, brother of the good Bishop of Cloyne, the Irish Plato, Dr. George Berkeley.

Bishop Berkeley's life and character are beautifully exhibited con amore, by the learned Dr. Stock, Bishop of Killala ; and they are now made an article of the Biographia Britannica, and prefixed to the quarto edition of Berkeley's Works and smaller tracts. The bishop's benignity of soul, fertile powers of imagination, profound taste and acquirements in the fine arts and roads of literature and poetry, were equally admired and acknowledged by all the world. He was the favourite of Queen Caroline, had formed a correspondence with the first men of the age in a tour of Southern Europe, and his acquaintance was desired by the highest ranks of nobility in England. Laudari a laudato viro is a prime article of posthumous felicity : Bishop Stock has consecrated Bishop Berkeley's memory to its deserved niche in the Temple of Fame, as Dublin University has classed his portrait in her Theatre with her sublimest geniuses and worthies. This was the bishop who declined the rich see of Derry, offered by the discerning and memorable Earl of Chesterfield in 1745—a cultivator of harmony in social life, as well as in musical performance, he expressed himself “pleased with his neighbours and they with him:” the bishop, to whom Mr. Pope, when speaking of the prelates of his time, has by way of eminence and climax, attributed “every virtue under heaven” with more than poetical precision. Co-extended with the Hon. Robert Boyle’s endeavours for the improvement of the eastern Indians, was Dr. Berkeley’s voyage beyond the confines of the Old World to the Bermudas Isles, to erect a University, where he staid a long time, till the disappointment of the promised sum from the minister, Sir Robert Walpole. The plan, if carried into execution, might have advanced British America half a century in improvement, and have indissolubly attached the colonies.

The long resident of Ballinacurra, Dr. Robert Berkeley, was educated at Kilkenny college, and obtained a Fellowship of Dublin University, the hardest earned and most honourable reward of learning, at the time when his brother resigned his Fellowship for church dignity. Ballinacurra, from the time of the Doctor’s residence, was through a long extended period the seat of hospitality, charity, genuine politeness and virtue, “in which no hour flew unimproved away; some generous deed distinguished every day.” The day was esteemed lost, that was not marked in the calendar of beneficence. Here the early loss of a mother of excellent, ingenious and learned family in the north of Ireland, in the neighbourhood of the Doctor’s college living, was replaced by a more than paternal attention to the improvement of a large offspring. The widowed father might with unimpeached veracity assert of his boys and girls, (as Phocion’s wife and Cornelia said to the Ionian matrons of their days) “hæc mea sunt Ornamenta.” Here visitors of high respectability from different quarters were seen together to enliven the rational society of the mansion. The courtly Plato and the writer of the immortal work De Officiis, the prince of Latin moralists, the Irish Hucheson of the Glasgow chair, on a visit here would have seen their ideal system of the to kalon & prepon, the pulcrum & decorum, the new Moral Sense

Sense of Beauty and Virtue, exhibited in real life. From the days of a man's sojourning through a weary pilgrimage, he might ever expunge those he spent at Ballinacurra. Here were

“Pudor, & Justitiæ Soror
“Incorrupta Fides, Nudaque Veritas.”

“Animæ, quales neque candidiores
Terra tulit :”

The reader may supply the remainder of the line.

With the bodily infirmities of the age of 87, the Doctor preserved his mental powers in the greenest verdure—wrote letters of public business, and private affectionate correspondence; his colloquial talents engaging, his manners kind and condescending to the young: he presided in ecclesiastical causes as spiritual Judge with unabated energy, managed his temporal concerns with most merciful attention to the poor, experienced himself the object of universal respect in the midst of insurgency.

Rosehill, the late Rev. Mr. Lawless. Up to Ballinacurra the tide flows, and store-houses for exportation of corn are erected. At 125 Cloyne: see-house. Kilbree, William Adams, Esq. Kilcrone, John Hanning, Esq. Castle-Mary, Lord Viscount Longueville. Whitewell. Rostellan, the Most Noble the Marquis of Thomond, on the east side of Cork harbour. From the sea boats come up close to the lawn or garden wall. Jamesbrook, W. Adams, Esq. Aghada Church. Whitegate, Thos. Travers, Esq. Charles Allen, Esq. Trabolgan, Edmund Roche, Esq. Carlisle Fort and Prince Rupert's Tower. Corkbeg, the fine seat of Col. Robert Uniacke Fitzgerald, Esq. M. P. for Cork County, built on a peninsula to which is a narrow isthmus from the main land. (Ballycotton distant from Cloyne four miles: the bay remarkable for the finest flat fish: the strand four miles long is, when the tide is out, the first in Europe. The Earl of Shannon's lodge.)

KERRY COUNTY.

ROADS, NOTED PLACES, SEATS, &c.

By Castle-island 133, Killarney 143, Mucrus 146, Kenmare town 155.

At 40 m from Limerick is Castle-island: charter-school endowed by the late Earl of Glendore, Edward Herbert, John Blennerhasset, Arthur Crosbie and Richard Meredith, Esqrs. Castle-island was taken A. D. 1345, 18th year of Edward III. by Sir Ralph Ufford, Lord Justice of Ireland, it being then held for Maurice Fitzthomas Fitzgerald the first Earl of Desmond, by Sir Eustace De la Poer, Sir Wm. Grant and Sir John Cotterel, who were all executed by Ufford. Here also Gerald, the 4th Earl of Desmond, commonly called the Poet, was murdered in 1397, 20th of Richard II. Queen Elizabeth granted this feigniory to the Herbert family, when it was stiled the feigniory of Mount Eagle Loyal.—At 41 Dysart Church ruins. 43 is Ducksgrove, Mr. Meredith. At 48 is Dunneen, Rev. Dr. Bland. Mount-Meredith, Mr. O'Donoghue. 49 Killarney, Lord Kenmare. The 3 lakes cover 6000 acres.

The lower lake is 7 m long, 4 m broad, communicating with the upper one by a narrow passage 3 m long. Ross Island is the largest in the lake—a mile in length, containing 80 or 100 acres. It is rather a peninsula, being only separated by a small cut through a morass from the mainland, over which is a bridge. Ross castle was the seat of the lords of the lake who assumed the title of kings, the family of the great O'Donoghue. It has a barrack for 2 companies of foot, and has a governor on the establishment.

At

and Flesk
Castle — Colleston
Isle

At Inisfallen Island 17 acres, the remains of an old abbey serve as a summer-house where parties of pleasure dine. The arbutus or strawberry tree thrives here prodigiously and in September bears blossoms, green and ripe fruit at once. Holly and juniper are here very large. The lordly oak, the ash, the pine, the birch and alder intermixed with white thorn, holly, hazel, yew, and ever beautiful arbutus, descending in full robed luxuriance to the very water's edge, join with spontaneous growth their tints of various hue to captivate and charm.

O'Sullivan's Cascade falls into the lake from Tomies mountain, with a roar which strikes the timid with awe on approaching it. The view of this sheet of water is uncommonly fine, appearing as if it were descending from an arch of wood which overhangs it, 70 feet in height from the point of view.—Two miles from Killarney are Cloughreen Church and Irrelagh Abbey ruins.

Mucrus gardens belonging to H. A. Herbert, Esq. are 3 m from Killarney. The cloisters of the abbey (founded 1440, 18th year of Hen. VI.) form a square of 12 yards, and consist of 22 arches. In the centre is a yew, the trunk of which is 7 feet in circumference and 15 in height to the branches, and form a perfect canopy to the cloisters, “shedding a dim religious light.—Copper mines near Mucrus have afforded in a year 375 tons, which produced from an ounce of the general sample 5 pennyweights 8 grains of copper, being considerably more than one fourth of pure metal.

At 4 m from Killarney is Mount Mangerton, which is 837 yards above the sea. Turk 640. Mac Gillycuddy's reeks 1180.—30 $\frac{2}{3}$ yards in perpendicular height are allowed to every $\frac{1}{10}$ of an inch of the mercury's fall in the barometer. On the west side of Mangerton is a large deep hole filled with water, called the Devil's Punch Bowl, which overflows and makes an agreeable cascade, visible 150 yards down the side of the mountain, in view of Mucrus house. This water supplies the mills for the iron works and then falls into Lough Laune.

Turk Mountain (called from the likeness of his white chalky top to the Turkish turban) belongs to Colonel H. Herbert, who has planted many thousand trees on it. The river Laune rises near the summit, and anciently gave its name to the whole lake.

At

At 6 miles from Killarney is the Upper Lake 3 m long, 1 m broad, environed by Glenaa and the Turk mountains, and Mac Gillycuddy's reeks. The waters of the upper pass into the lower division by Coleman's Eye, and from thence are discharged into the sea at Castlemain-bay, distant 20 miles by the river Laune.

The celebrated rock called the Eagle's Nest, 500 yards high, produces wonderful Echoes, infinitely superior to any in that land of Echoes the Peak of Derbyshire. A French horn sounded here, raises a concert superior to a hundred instruments, and the report of a musket or paterero is answered by a succession of peals resembling the loudest thunder, which seems to travel the surrounding scenery and die away among the distant mountains.

Occasionally Lord Kenmare gives a stag hunt on the water. The deer is started on the mountain, and wearied with the constant difficulty of making way with his lofty ramified antlers through the woods, which every way oppose his flight: alarmed by the cry of his open mouth pursuers he plunges into the lake, the company following in boats till the animal is seized.

At 9 m from Mucrus and 11 from Killarney is Kenmare town: bay 3 m long. Landsdown-lodge, Lord Henry Petty. Charles Spread, Esq.

Cashel was the royal seat and metropolis of the kings of Munster, who were proclaimed on a large stone on the ascent to the cathedral. (Sir James Ware who died 1666 says he saw the stone.) Archb. Rich. O'Hedian in the last year of the reign of Henry V. 1421, gave the vicars choral the lands called Grange Connel and Thurlesbeg. In the 10th year of Henry VII. 1495, the 8th Earl of Kildare burned the cathedral, intending (as he himself confessed to Henry VII.) to destroy archbishop David Creagh in it. In 1647 in the civil war between the parliament and King Charles I. the inhabitants deserted the city: the cathedral was fortified, and Lord Taafe placed a garrison in it, but Lord Inchiquin took it by storm, and slaughter was made of the garrison and citizens, among whom were 20 priests or friars. From 1647 the ancient cathedral was kept in repair, and divine service performed in it till 1752, when it was unroofed by archbishop Price. His Grace the Earl of Normanton wished to restore it, but the walls being in a dangerous state relinquished the design, and erected in the town below a church, placed in it an organ which cost 600*l*. procured an organist and established a choir.

LIMERICK COUNTY

ROADS, NOTED PLACES, SEATS, &c.

By Anacotty 91, Limerick 94, Loughmore 97, Patrick's-well 99, Adare 102, Rathkeale 108, Newcastle 114, Clonkenny 118, Abbyfeale 123.

Beyond 88 (on the road to O'Brien's Bridge) is Castleconnel Spa and Castle ruins on the Shannon, blown up 1690 by order of the Prince of Hesse. At 89 by the Shannon is New Garden, Simon Purdon, Esq. 90 Prospect, Mr. Powel. Mount Shannon, the late Earl of Clare. 91 Anacotty, a paper mill built by the late Mr. Joseph Sexton, one of the oldest in Ireland. Gran, Mr. Gough. Rivers, Brooke Braher, Esq. Castle Troy on an island in the Shannon. At 92 Milford, Rev. Mr. Widenham. Newcastle ruins, the residence of King William during Limerick siege. At 93 Singland, Mr. Dwyer. On an island is Park, Sir Richard de Bourgho, Bart. At 94 Limerick. St. Munchin's gothic cathedral, built 1207 by Donald O'Brien, then king of Limerick, which is a building that may last for ages to come. Three other parish churches; houses 4800. The ancient city consists of the English town (on the King's Island 3 m round) and the Irish town, connected by Baal's bridge over the Shannon: 17 city gates demolished since 1760 to the improvement of the city. Lord Pery built a new town called Newtown-Pery. The new bridge built 1761 of 3 arches: the centre one 40 feet in span, admits boats under sail. Vessels of 500 tons burden can come up to the custom-house and discharge their cargoes, 60 miles from the sea, where the Shannon mouth is 7 or 8 m broad. Inhabitants habitants in the new and old cities are 50,000. The Shannon here is from one to three miles broad, the noblest stream in the British dominions, well frequented with merchant ships. It is navigable for ships of 900 tons burden from the sea beyond Limerick till the interruption of the falls of Doonasse: by a canal the communication is kept up with Killaloe for small craft, and from thence is navigable 150 miles through ten counties. Thomond bridge of 14 arches is built 600 years.

In 1650 Cromwel could make no impression on the citizens of Limerick, whose attachments were divided between the pope's nuncio, King Charles I. and the parliamentary army: nor would Ormond be admitted to defend it for Charles I. In 1651 Col. Hugh O'Neal defended it against Ireton, son-in-law to Cromwel: he was forced to give it up through the treachery of Col. Fennel, who had before abandoned the passage of the Shannon at Killaloe. Count Lausun, to whom King James entrusted the conduct of his army in Ireland, to the great prejudice of his own interests in the court of France, withdrew his men from Limerick as untenable, declaring on viewing the fortifications, that his master would take it with roasted apples, yet Sarsfield the Irish general undertook its defence, and held it out against the Prince of Orange with 20,000 men after his victory at the Boyne 1690. September 21, 1691, Gen. Ginkle invested it. The French and Irish retired thither after William's victory at Aughrim, and after a gallant resistance it surrendered October 13, on an honorable capitulation.—At 1 m from Limerick is Rosbrien, Mr. Villiers. 3 m Loughmore, Mr. Bindon, Mungret Abbey ruins. 4 m Graig, Mr. Greene. Mount Hewson, Mr. Hewson. 5 Patrick's well, Faha, Mr. Tuthill. Attyflin, Mr. Westrop. Ballybronoge, Mr. Dickson. Near 8 m is Adair, Lord Adair, deer-park 400 acres. It has a military governor who is commander of Calmore Fort. Church and spire on the summit of the hill on which the town is built. The walls built in 1614. The ramparts 12 feet thick. In 1691 the town held out against James II. under the command of Rev. George Walker, from April 17 to July 31, 105 days, or 14 weeks; 600 bombs were thrown in; they were reduced to the greatest distress for want of provisions, till they were relieved by general Kirk. A view of the siege, and a representation of the Rev. George Walker and his associates was wrought in curious tapestry of the richest colours, at the expence of parliament, and erected in the House of Lords.

A bridge of American oak 1068 feet long, 40 feet broad, the first of the kind introduced into Ireland, transported across the Atlantic. It was built in 13 months at the expence of the corporation by Mess. Lemuel Cox and Jonathan Thompson, and opened 1790. A gaol 120 feet in in front, 40 feet high: 3 separate yards, the walls extending 150 feet, 30 feet high, 50 cells for felons.

Herrings taken in Lough Swilly 7 miles distant are saved and exported. Several ships are sent to the West-Indies, New England and Newfoundland, and arrive in America before a ship from London bound to America can get clear of the soundings or arrive in Londonderry latitude.

Dunkin. 118 Giant's Causeway consisting of a bold and rocky cliff projecting into the sea and formed by 30,000 many and various sided pillars standing closely together, gether, and constituting with corresponding sides an uninterrupted continuation of stony pavement above, varied sometimes only by the different heights of the pillars: each pillar consists of a number of pieces of various length, but exactly fitted at their horizontal junction, not with level surfaces as in works of art, but what is most extraordinary, with corresponding curves alternately convex and concave; the pillars are articulated into each other as a ball in a socket, the one end of the joint having a cavity into which the convex end of the other is exactly fitted. This occasions matter of speculation on the formation of this phenomenon, whether it be lava and the effect of fire, or the production of a slow and natural crystallisation. The substance is a dark coloured grit abounding with iron ore. A model in wood is in the Museum of Dublin University.

The space of 15 miles from Portrush strand eastward to the Giant's Causeway and thence to Ballycastle, is one continued mass of lava.

From Moatgrenoge 52, entering Roscommon County to Athlone 59, entering Galway County to Ballinafloe 71.

At 59 you enter Roscommon County. Athlone, (Irish Ath Luan) the key of Connaught, and the umbilicus of Ireland: the charter school between two branches of the Shannon:

The Shannon passes through ten counties, dividing Leitrim, Longford and Westmeath east from Roscommon west,
King's and Tipperary east from Galway west,
Limerick and Kerry east from Clare west,

It receives considerable streams from Sliebhan Erin mountain in Leitrim county: receives the Buelle in Roscommon: the Camlin in Longford county: the Inny in Longford and Westmeath: the Suck in Roscommon and Gal-

Galway: the Brosna in King's County: the lower Brosna in King's and Tipperary: the Maig in Limerick: the Bunratty and Fergus in Clare: the Askeyton in Limerick.

It expands itself into 6 different loughs:

Lough Clean,
Lough Allen,
Lough Booderig,
Lough Baffin in Leitrim county,
Lough Ree in Longford county,
Lough Deirgeart in Tipperary county.

It has Cloondra Isle in Longford county,
Foynes Isle in Limerick,
Scattery Isle in Clare,
Carrigue Isle in Kerry.

It passes in Leitrim county by Ballintra, Leitrim town, Carrick, Jamestown, Drumsna, Rusky bridge. In Longford county by Castle Forbes, Tarmonbarry bridge, Lanesborough. In Roscommon and Westmeath by Athlone. In Galway by Shannon bridge, Clonsfert and Portumna. In King's County by Clonmacnois and Bannagher. In Clare by Killaloe, O'Brien's bridge, Bunratty and Kilrush. In Limerick by Limerick. In Kerry by Tarbert and Ballylongford.

The Shannon runs from North to South; perhaps the greatest river in any island, navigable 150 miles to the falls of Doonasse, near Killaloe, and navigable from Limerick 60 m to the sea. Its source is near Manor Hamilton, in Leitrim county: it forms a small lake called Lough Clean near its source: a few miles lower it expands into Lough Allen, 7 m long, 2 broad, surrounded by Mounterkenny Mountains W. and Sliebhan Erin Mountains E. from which the lough receives considerable streams. In Geevach Mountain, part of the Mounterkenny Mountains, are Arigna iron mines and collieries. The Shannon issuing from Lough Allen at Balintra runs to Leitrim town, dividing Leitrim E. from Roscommon W. and from thence to Carrick, (being joined by the Buelle river, navigable to Boyle 8 miles.) From Carrick it runs to Jamestown, thence it winds to Drumsnave. (A canal is cut from Jamestown to Drumsnave to remedy the quadruple distance by water, and

and avoid some shoals. From Drumsnave to Rusky-bridge the Shannon is extended to a lake, the upper part called Lough Booderig, and the lower end Lough Baffin. From Rusky-bridge the Shannon divides Longford E. from Roscommon W. and 3 miles below Rusky-bridge forms a lake, on the eastern coast of which is Castle Forbes, the Earl of Granard. The Shannon receives the Camlin river, navigable to Longford, and near their junction they form Cloondra Island, 2 m long, $1\frac{1}{2}$ broad. From Tarmonbarry-bridge the Shannon winds to Lanesborough, and then expands into Lough Ree, 13 m long, interspersed with islands. The Shannon receives the Inny river from Longford and W. Meath. Above Athlone a canal 1 mile long is cut to avoid the shallows, and joins the Shannon below the town. Here the Shannon divides W. Meath and King's E. from Roscommon W. and runs to Shannon-bridge, where it divides King's E. from Galway W. and receives the Suck river, navigable many miles between Roscommon and Galway counties. On the eastern bank in King's county is Clonmacnois or the Seven Churches. From Shannon-bridge it is joined by the Brosna river from the King's county, and runs to Banagher: then it receives the lower Brosna from King's and Tipperary counties in its course to Portumna-bridge, the Earl of Clanricarde, where it divides Tipperary E. from Galway W. In its way to Killaloe it spreads into Lough Deirgeart. At Killaloe it divides Limerick E. from Clare W. and proceeds to O'Brien's-bridge, from whence a canal is cut 4 miles long, which meets the Shannon near Limerick: and another canal commencing below this junction, runs through Limerick to avoid the falls of the salmon weir; beyond which the Shannon forms the King's island, where the part of Limerick called the English town stands. In its course from Limerick it receives the Maig river from Limerick county (navigable to Adare 7 miles above its junction.) It receives the Bunratty or Oil mill river from Clare county near Bunratty Castle, the ancient seat of the O'Briens, princes of Thomond. Then it receives the Fergus from Clare county, 3 miles broad, interspersed with extensive islands, navigable for ships to Clare bridge 9 m, and for boats to Ennis 11 m. It receives also the Askeyton river from Limerick county, navigable to Askeyton town, a few miles distant. From Bunratty to Foyn's island, the Shannon is 2 or 3 m broad:

thence to Tarbert, where it divides Kerry E. from Clare W. it becomes more contracted: beyond Tarbert it spreads near 4 m at Inis Scattery island, opposite Kilrush in Clare county. Then it proceeds to Carigue island in Clare county, opposite Ballylongford in Kerry county. At 7 or 8 miles further it discharges itself between Loophead in Clare county North, and Kerry Head in Kerry county South, forming, perhaps, the noblest mouth of a river in Europe, 8 miles over.
